

Notes on Contributors

Anton L. Allahar was born in Trinidad, West Indies, and completed his PhD in Political & Economic Sociology at the University of Toronto. He is Professor Emeritus at Western University (Canada). Professor Allahar's areas of interest are globalization, democracy and nationalism, the sociology of economic development and the political sociology of race and ethnicity in capitalist society.

Dennis C. Canterbury is an Emeritus Professor at Eastern Connecticut State University and author of several books including Capital Accumulation and Migration (Haymarket Books 2013), Caribbean Development and the New Multipolarity (Routledge 2022), and edited Extractivism and Labor in the Caribbean (Routledge 2023).

Derefe Kimarley Chevannes is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Memphis, who specializes in Africana Political Theory. Chevannes' research interests center on issues of black liberation and black radical thought in the modern world. He writes at the intersection of Political Theory, Africana Studies, Caribbean Studies, and Disability Studies.

George K. Danns is a Professor of Sociology at the University of North Georgia. He served as Visiting Fulbright Professor, Department of Sociology, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Guyana. He conducted extensive research in Guyana and the LAC region and has numerous refereed publications. Books include Domination and Power in Guyana (Routledge 2017); Dynamics of Caribbean Diaspora Engagement: People, Policy, Practice (University of Guyana Press 2018); Comparative Assessment of Social Issues in Africa, Latin America, and the Caribbean (Lexington Books 2023).

Stephanie Fullerton-Cooper is Associate Professor of Language and Literature at the University College of the Cayman Islands. A UWI, Mona graduate, she has obtained a BA (Hons), MPhil, and PhD in Literatures in English; later, a PGDE (Hons), and recently, a Master of Laws in Law and Legal Studies (LLM). Dr Fullerton-Cooper co-edited two books, The Caribbean in a Changing World: Surveying the Past, Mapping the Future, Volumes 1 and 2, and The Cayman Islands: History, Politics and Society—Essays in Honour of JA Roy Bodden in 2016 and in 2022, and her current research focuses on Caribbean and Cayman literature.

Juan Felipe García is Director of the Departamento de Filosofía e Historia del Derecho and founder of Clínica Jurídica Derecho y Territorio, both at Facultad de Ciencias Jurídicas, Pontificia Universidad Javeriana (Bogotá). Together with Oscar Guardiola-Rivera, he has completed the manuscript of Journals of the Twenty-First Century Years of Plague, currently under review by the thinker and anthropologist Michael Taussig.

Oscar Guardiola-Rivera is an award-winning author. Professor of Political Philosophy and Human Rights at Birkbeck School of Law, Birkbeck College, University of London; Founding Director Instituto de Estudios Sociales y Culturales—Pensar, Pontificia Universidad Javeriana (Bogotá) and Visiting Professor PUC-Rio (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil). His poetic novel Under the World, Night of the World 2 is forthcoming in March 2024 with The 87 Press.

Paget Henry is Emeritus Professor of Africana Studies and Sociology at Brown University. He is the author of Peripheral Capitalism and Underdevelopment in Antigua, Caliban's Reason: Introducing Afro-Caribbean Philosophy, and Shouldering Antigua and Barbuda: The Life of V.C. Bird.

Leslie R. James is Professor of Religious Studies at DePauw University. His publications include articles in a number of journals and edited volumes such as The Oxford University Dictionary of Latin American and Caribbean Biography. He is the author of Toward an Ecumenical Liberation Theology: A Critical Exploration of Common Dimensions in the Theologies of Juan L. Segundo and Rubem A. Alves. His research focus includes the History of Religions, Afro-Atlantic Religious and Philosophical Thought, and Religion, Society, and Social Change. He received his PhD from Saint Louis University.

Thomas Jay Lynn is Associate Professor of English at Penn State Berks. His book, Chinua Achebe and the Politics of Narration: Envisioning Language, was published by Palgrave Macmillan in 2017. Tom's writing on African literature has been published in numerous refereed journals. In 2020 Tom was elected to a three-year term as the British and Global Anglophone Studies Director of the Northeast Modern Language Association. He was awarded the Penn State University Comparative Literature Sydney Aboul-Hosn Award 2021 for making "a decisive contribution to [students'] study of literature in a global context."

Roy McCree is a Senior Fellow at the Sir Arthur Lewis Institute of Social and Economic Studies (SALISES). He first worked at the Institute as a Graduate Research Assistant from 1991 to 1995, when it was still the Institute of Social and Economic Research (ISER). He has been a full-time member of staff since 1996. His research interests have covered the areas of sport, culture, race relations, policy evaluation and social policy in particular relation to the issues of youth, community development, suicide, social capital and gambling. He has a particular interest, however, in the study of sport and its social, political, economic, cultural and technological significance in the development of modern society.

Rachel McNealis is a PhD candidate of philosophy at Marquette University. Previously, she completed a combined BA/MA of philosophy at Miami University in Ohio. She also holds a graduate certificate in women's, gender, and sexuality studies. She specializes in philosophy of sex, sexual ethics, queer theory, and decolonial feminisms.

Frederick Mills is Professor of Philosophy at Bowie State University and a member of the Association of Philosophy and Liberation (AFyL). His publications on Dussel include Enrique Dussel's Ethics of Liberation: An Introduction (Palgrave Macmillan 2018), and "Dussel Now: The Transmodern Alternative" (Orinoco Tribune, Nov. 5, 2021).

Marilyn Nissim-Sabat is Professor Emeritus, Lewis University philosophy department. She is the author of Neither Victim nor Survivor (Lexington, 2009) and co-editor (with Neil Roberts) of Creolizing Arendt (Roman and Littlefield, April, 2024). She is also a psychodynamic psychotherapist and the author of numerous book chapters, reviews, and articles in the fields of phenomenology, psychoanalysis, feminism, critical race theory and Marxism.

Yue Qiu finished this paper at her undergraduate institution, Duke Kunshan University, China. She is now a first-year PhD student in history at the University of Wisconsin Madison.

Annalee (Annie) Ring is an ABD doctoral candidate in Philosophy at the University of Oregon whose research focuses on intersectional feminisms, critical philosophy of race, environmental philosophy, and continental methodologies. Her work on cleanliness has received multiple awards including the Philosophy Matters Prize and the best graduate student essay at the International Association for Environmental Philosophy. This paper is a part of a larger project that includes archival research conducted through the Smithsonian's Baird Society Resident Scholar Fellowship and a grant from the Center for the Study of Women in Society.

August Shipman is a PhD candidate in Political Science at the University of Connecticut focusing on political violence, global Southern dialectical and historical materialism, anti-imperialist theory and theorists, and sociogenic psychology. Shipman completed his MSc in Violence, Conflict and Development at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London where his master's dissertation elucidated detraumatization as a key dimension in Frantz Fanon's dialectical view of violence and national liberation by demystifying Eurocentric ontologies that both obscure and dehumanize the work of Fanon and other global Southern theorists. His transdisciplinary interests coalesced during his work with at-risk youth following the completion of his undergraduate degrees in psychology, sociology, and Women's studies. In the future, Shipman hopes to author a book titled, The Wretched of the School, which aims to assist youth suffering from bullying and administrative negligence by adapting Frantz Fanon's work on sociogeny and counterviolence into the context of bullying and other Manichean social relations.

Justin Wooley is a third-year doctoral student in the Philosophy Department at University of Memphis. His research interests include social and political philosophy, philosophy of race, and critiques of state violence.