

Business & Professional Ethics Journal

Contents

Vol. 28, Nos. 1–4 (2009)

“Justice as Freedom”: Do We Have a New Approach to a Firm’s Enterprise Strategy? Subodh P. Kulkarni	3
Meaningful Work and Moral Worth Christopher Michaelson	27
Beguiling Would-Be Serpents: Gerald Dworkin, Bear Stearns, and the Sarbanes-Oxley Act Todd Furman and Bill Hartmann	49
Examining International Information Technology Sourcing through an Ethical Lens: An Application of Alternative Ethical Frameworks Peter Haried and Derek Nazareth	65
Can Spiritual Leadership Lead Us Not Into Temptation? Jay R. Tombaugh and Elaine F. Tombaugh	95
Notes on Contributors	121

NOTE TO SUBSCRIBERS

As you know the Business and Professional Ethics Journal has been behind schedule for several years. During that time, the journal’s primary focus has been to maintain the high quality of its content while also keeping its subscription rates constant.

As editor I am pleased to announce that the journal is moving aggressively to get back on schedule in cooperation with the Philosophy Documentation Center. Volumes 25 (2006), 26 (2007), and 27 (2008) are being published as single issues to help us work through our backlog. All current subscribers will receive these issues. All back issues of the journal have been digitized by the Philosophy Documentation Center and electronic subscription options are now available.

Thank you for your patience and continuing support of the Business and Professional Ethics Journal. We are looking forward to getting the journal back on schedule, and to continuing its commitment to the publication of excellent and affordable scholarship.