JANE KOPAS

101 Whitehead's View of Creaturehood and Its Religious Implications

JANE KOPAS (Ph.D., Graduate Theological Union, Berkeley) is Assistant Professor of Theology/Religious Studies at the University of Scranton, Scranton, Pennsylvania 18510. Her dissertation on the meaning and function of religion in Whitehead's thought was done under the direction of Bernard Loomer. She has been concerned to bring a process-relational perspective to bear on the theology and spirituality of creaturely existence. Her articles have appeared in several journals.

WILLIAM DEAN

111 An American Theology

WILLIAM DEAN is Professor of Religion at Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minnesota 56082. He has published Coming To: A Theology of Beauty (Westminster, 1972) and Love Before the Fall (Westminster, 1976). An article entitled "Whitehead's Other Aesthetic" is forthcoming in Process Studies. He is currently interested in the correctives for process theology emanating from its American background, particularly radical empiricism and pragmatism.
