

Environmental Philosophy

Spring 2020

Volume 17, Issue 1

Special Issue: Climate Change and the Task of Thinking

Edited by Tim Christian

CONTENTS

ARTICLES

- Climate Change and the Task of Thinking:
Introduction to the Special Issue
Tim Christian 1
- What Needs to Change in Our Thinking about
Climate Change (and about Thinking) Michael Marder 9
- Thinking Ecologically, Knowing Responsibly Lorraine Code 19
- Is There Something Wrong With the Task of Thinking? Claire Colebrook 39
- Being in the Anthropocene: World
Appropriation in the Age of Global Warming Albert Borgmann 59
- Indigenous Peoples and Climate Change:
Humanistic Explorations of Cultural Resilience
Chie Sakakibara, Elise Horensky, and Sloane Garelick 75
- How Could We Rescue the World Today? Luce Irigaray 93
- From a Lifeboat Ethic to Anthropocene Sensibilities Nancy Tuana 101
- Anthropogenic Temporalities:
The Time of the End and the End of Time Eduardo Mendieta 125
- Not all Humans: Radical Criticism of the Anthropocene Narrative Hasana Sharp 143
- Motivating a “Thinkable Politics”: A Critical
Phenomenology of Climate Response Tim Christian 159

BOOK REVIEWS

What Has No Place, Remains: The Challenges for Indigenous Religious Freedom in Canada Today—

by Nicholas Shrubsole

Jonathan Beever 183

Watsuji on Nature: Japanese Philosophy in the Wake of Heidegger—

by David W. Johnson

Maximilian G. Hepach 187

Anthropocene Poetics: Deep Time, Sacrifice Zones, and Extinction—

by David Farrier

Conrad Scott 192

In Defense of Public Lands: The Case against Privatization and Transfer—

by Steven Davis

Jared L. Talley 196