

MIDWEST STUDIES IN PHILOSOPHY

Volume XLIV

Philosophy of Dance

Dances, Danceworks, and Choreographic Works:
A Plea for Conceptual Clarity	Renee M. Conroy 7
“Like-Sensing Subjects”: Husserl and Dance.	Carrie Noland 21
The Paradox of Post-Performance Amnesia.	Barbara Gail Montero 38
Image Consciousness, Movement Consciousness	Jonathan Owen Clark 48
Some Stabs at the Ontology of Dance	Noël Carroll 70
Identity in Dance: What Happened?	Julie C. Van Camp 81
Audiences Appreciating Dances	Graham McFee 92
Dance Seen and Dance-Screened	David Davies 117
On Dancers as Coauthors	Paul Thom 133
Dance as Art, Theatre, and Practice: Somaesthetic Perspectives	Richard Shusterman 143
Rhythm and Movement: The Conceptual Interdependence of Music, Dance, and Poetry.	Andy Hamilton 161
Is Tap Dance a Form of Jazz Percussion?	Aili Bresnahan 183
Can There Be Conceptual Dance?	Anna Pakes 195
Beauty Always Dies: The Philosophical Significance of Nonenduring Artworks	Troy Jollimore 213
Three Kinds of Movement	Barry Allen 231
Movement: What Evolution and Gesture Can Teach Us About Its Centrality in Natural History and Its Lifelong Significance	Maxine Sheets-Johnstone 239
Beyond Petipa and Before the Academy: Plato, Socrates and Alexei Ratmansky’s Serenade After Plato’s Symposium.	Kristin Boyce 260