

MIDWEST STUDIES IN PHILOSOPHY

Volume XXIX

Free Will and Moral Responsibility

Can We Ever Be Really, Truly, Ultimately, Free?	Mark Bernstein	1
On an Argument for the Impossibility of Moral Responsibility	Randolph Clarke	13
Deliberation and Metaphysical Freedom	E. J. Coffman and Ted A. Warfield	25
Alienation, Autonomy, and the Self	Laura Waddell Ekstrom	45
Neurobiology, Neuroimaging, and Free Will	Walter Glannon	68
Frankfurt-Style Counterexamples and Begging the Question	Stewart Goetz	83
Freedom, Obligation, and Responsibility: Prospects for a Unifying Theory	Ishtiyaque Haji	106
Moral Responsibility and Buffered Alternatives	David P. Hunt	126
Decisions, Intentions, and Free Will	Alfred R. Mele	146
Where Frankfurt and Strawson Meet	Michael McKenna	163
Freedom, Responsibility and the Challenge of Situationism	Dana K. Nelkin	181
Freedom with a Human Face	Timothy O'Connor	207
Defending Hard Incompatibilism	Derk Pereboom	228
Free Will and Respect for Persons	Saul Smilansky	248
PAPistry: Another Defense	Daniel Speak	262
The Trouble with Tracing	Manuel Vargas	269
Blameworthiness, Non-robust Alternatives, and the Principle of Alternative Expectations	David Widerker	292
More on "Ought" Implies "Can" and the Principle of Alternate Possibilities	Gideon Yaffe	307