

THE MODERN SCHOOLMAN

---

JANUARY/MARCH 2001

Religious Citizens Within the Limits of Public Reason . . . . .	105
Philip L. Quinn
Religious Conviction and Political Advocacy: (A Commentary on Quinn) . . . . .	125
Jeffrie G. Murphy
Citizenship, Reflective Endorsement and Political Autonomy . . . . .	135
Paul J. Weithman
Is There Any Basis for Rawls's Duty of Civility?: (A Commentary on Weithman) . . . . .	151
Thomas Christiano
Christian Imperatives and Civil Life . . . . .	163
Jean Bethke Elshtain
Keeping Hope Alive: (A Commentary on Elshtain) . . . . .	179
Richard H. Dees
Religion and Public Life: Engaged Pluralism . . . . .	189
Richard J. Bernstein
Religion, Morality, and Law in Liberal Democratic Societies: Divine Command Ethics and the Separation of Religion and Politics . . . . .	199
Robert Audi
Divine Commands and Public Reason: (A Commentary on Audi) . . . . .	219
Lawrence B. Solum

Do Christians Have Good Reason for Supporting Liberal Democracy? .....	229
Nicholas Wolterstorff
Religious and Moral Reason for Supporting Liberal Democracy: (A Commentary on Wolterstorff) .....	249
Thomas M. Schmidt	