
Contents

An interview with Stephan Körner, 79

Leviathan* caught? 86

R. Beehler

Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679) held that a sovereign has no obligations to the ruled. But does he hold consistently to this view?

The problem of other minds, 91

Grant Gillett

I talk, interact and live with others. Other what?

Freedom and science, 96

David Cockburn

Science has demonstrated the dependence of behaviour on physiological conditions, so are we not responsible for anything we do?

The puzzle about Pierre, 101

Laurence Goldstein

When thinking gets distorted by being put into words

The problem of personal identity, 106

James Baillie

What constitutes a person?

The sophist's dilemma in Plato's Meno, 112

Dale Jacquette

A challenge to the possibility of acquiring knowledge

Philosophy in Iran, 119

Mohammed Seied-Abbassadeh

Philosophy is at the heart of life in Iran

Philosophy and transferable thinking skills, 123

Alec Fisher

Do the lessons of the philosophy class generalize?

Taking philosophy to the streets, 128

Tim Crane

A new Centre for Philosophical Studies at King's College, London

Puzzles and posers, 132

Martin Hollis

Metaphysical bets, 133

R.A. Sharpe

On the problems of being a punter: a reply to Mary Haight

The party-goers guide to philosophy, 134

Adam Morton

Book reviews, 135

Editor's booknotes and books received, 137

Philosophy news, 139