

---

Contents

An Interview with Jean Hampton, 93

Justice, Knowledge and Indeterminacy: Mapping the Limits of Reason, 98

Anthony Stamp

The winning entry in the 1995 Essay
Competition

The Social Relativity of Justice and Rights Thesis, 105

John Hund

We all say, at times, that justice is relative to a framework of rules. But do we really mean it?

Thomas Reid (1710–1796), 108

Roger Gallie

The History Corner takes a look at the founder of the Scottish 'Philosophy of Common Sense'

Eco-Authoritarianism, Eco-Reformism or Eco-Marxism?: Part Two of 'Foundations for Developing a Green Political Theory', 115

Alan Carter

Why certain proposed solutions won't work

The Philosophy of Perception, 123

Jordan Howard Sobel

Reassessing the implications of the age-old argument from illusion

Liberalism and its Problems, 129

Michael Parker

Is liberalism just a political philosophy, or does it depend on an unacceptable metaphysical conception of the self?

On the Justification of Political Violence, 135

David Morrice

When, if ever, is it justified to take up arms
for a worthy cause?

A Dialogue Between Generations for the 'Soul' Purpose of Understanding Immanuel
Kant's Categorical Imperative, 142

Bonnie Stelmach

Sophy and her grandpa discuss Kant's ethics

The Singular Affair of the Poisoned Water-bottle, 152

Ross Cogan

Sherlock Holmes in a wonderland of possible worlds

Analysis Exercise 10: Reid on Colour, 154

Letters to the Editor, 156

Book Reviews, 158

Editor's Booknote, 162

Philosophy News, 163

Puzzles and Posers, 165

Crossword, 166