
Contents

An interview with Anthony Kenny, 3

Absolutism and nuclear deterrence/1, 8

Robin Taylor

This paper, and the one which follows, are a debate on one of the most pressing of all current moral problems: Is a policy of nuclear deterrence acceptable?

Absolutism and nuclear deterrence/2, 14

Richard Norman

Why philosophy? 20

Brenda Almond

A philosopher looks at the commitment of philosophy in the world of today

Equal value: or equal rights to equal liberties, 25

Antony Flew

How to reject the view that all human beings should be equally valued

The extent of the a priori, 29

Colwyn Williamson

Can philosophers provide us with knowledge a priori? A cautionary tale

'Health' as an aesthetic concept, 35

Rom Harré

Is feeling healthy an aesthetic experience like looking at a painting?

Counting numbers, 41

Michael Bulley

What sorts of things are numbers? Are they real?

Rothko: aesthetic and non-aesthetic responses, 47

Trevor Pateman

On making contact with Rothko

Critical thinking and philosophy for children, 50

Clive Lindop

The educational value of philosophy

Philosophy publishing in the post-war period, 55

Angela Blackman

Books, publishing and philosophy have each been undergoing profound changes

Deep ecology and intrinsic value: a reply to Andrew Dobson, 61

Robin Attfield

Further discussion of the philosophical basis of the Green Movement

Terrorism: the right response? 66

Paul Gilbert

Continuing the discussion

A note on the v-elimination rule, 69

Karl Pfeifer

Getting rid of a student misunderstanding

Editor's booknotes and books received, 70

Letter, 73

Cogito Society Annual General Meeting

1989, 73

Philosophy news, 75