

---

Contents

An interview with Professor Sir Peter Strawson, 3

The argument from morality, 8

Brian Davies

The final paper in the series on arguments for the existence of God considers various claims that have been made for a theistic basis to human morality

F.H. Bradley, 14

Guy Stock

One of a series of occasional articles that examines the ideas of figures from Britain's philosophical past who may not be well known to Cogito readers

Consciousness: a functionalist approach, 20

Peter Smith

The first of two papers that consider the case for explaining human consciousness as a hierarchical structure of brain processes

Two views of the soul, 26

David Cockburn

Must we hold that human beings have Cartesian 'souls' before we can respect and care for them?

J.L. Austin and linguistic philosophy, 30

G.J. Warnock

J.L. Austin has often been regarded as the leader of, and spokesman for, the practice of linguistic philosophy. This view does scant justice to his concerns for philosophy

Creativity: the case of an obstinate painter, 36

Bernard Curtis

Deep ecology, 41

Andrew Dobson

A study in the philosophy of the Green Movement . . . but philosophy is not enough

Sex for sale: the morality of prostitution, 47

David Archard

Is the sale of sex as acceptable a commercial practice as the sale of life insurance policies? To think so is naively to ignore the harm that it does to the role of women in society

Terrorism: war or crime? 51

Paul Gilbert

Terrorism challenges the state. Is it ever justified against a democracy? What should be the attitude of a democratic state towards terrorism?

Terrorism: a reply, 57

William Watts Miller

A philosophical long march: from China to the World, 58

Liu Dachun

The World Congress Meeting in Brighton: the view from Beijing

Three contributions on a common theme

The meaning of life, 63

An article by Oswald Hanfling

'Life and death' at the Open University, 67

Book reviews by Paula Boddington

The Island of the Unborn, 70

A play by Jonathan Harrison

Puzzles and posers, 71

Martin Hollis

Philosophy at Manchester Grammar School, 72

Michael Palmer

Editor's booknotes and books received, 76

Letters, 78

Annual General Meeting of the COGITO Society, 79

President's Report

Announcements, 81

Philosophy news, 82