INSIDER'S REPORT ON CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITY

MAY/JUNE 1999

VOL. 13, NO. 3

musings

Do Stockholders "Own" Corporations?

Viewing the corporation as a piece of property is ancient—and misleading. page 4

company watch

Workers set the boss's pay...Fortune trashes Levi's...Guess who's doing social investing?...5,566 fortune cookies...Bad sales pitches... (Unopened) Open books...The rich kick themselves out of politics. page 5

Worth Noting

Is property tax abatement a corporate entitlement?...Clean cars and dirty factories... McDonald's "forestry scorecard"...Labor-management committees work. page 6

warning signs

Beware office parties...I'm a businessman but I play a doctor on TV...Smokey Bear is not for sale...Mergers against the public interest...A hand in the cookie jar. page 8

Pro and Con: Punitive Damages Should Be Outlawed

Two law professors debate (vigorously). page 7

Curbing Credit Card Abuse

Abusive fees and penalties have replaced interest as the main revenue source. page 7

Hanford Nuclear Site Radiates Innovation

An innovative dispute resolution helps clean up the nation's worst environmental mess. page 11

SPECIAL SECTION: HUMAN RIGHTS ALERT

See No Evil

Mobil's equipment is used to dig mass graves... Chevron's helicopters fly in soldiers who kill activists...Police beat protestors at Enron's gates. And the companies just look the other way. page 14

Helping the Private Sector Embrace Human Rights

Companies don't have to go it alone anymore: Two new associations have created voluntary codes of conduct, and uniform monitoring mechanisms. page 16

Doing It Right

Companies out ahead of the pack in managing for human rights...Resources for further research...Reebok honors human rights activists. page 17
