musings

The End of the Shareholder Value Era

The shareholder value obsession has been with us twenty years, but it may not be for much longer. page 5

company watch

Creative ways to bridge the digital divide... Does self-inspection work at Boeing?... Former GM CEO sets out to replace internal combustion engine... Which computer makers are the greenest?... Saving salmon = saving money. page 6

Hot Fudge Partners

An insider's story of how social investors tried to (but couldn't) buy Ben & Jerry's. page 7

trend watch

Companies stampede away from conservative Global Climate Coalition... The gay-friendly workplace goes mainstream... Folks mad as hell about globalization... Turning relationships into commodities... more. page 8

warning signs

Labor monitoring by legal mandate... It started out innocently, with a training class... Union Carbide chairman says, when in doubt, run... Pull that charter, sir... Sign here (and forfeit legal rights). page 9

COVER SECTION

MBA: Making Business Accountable

Best business schools for social and environmental responsibility

There's some great stuff happening in MBA programs... too bad it's happening at only one in five business schools. A survey of cutting-edge programs, with charts showing what each school has to offer. page 10
