

Midwest Studies in Philosophy
 Volume XVII
 The Wittgenstein Legacy

Colors, Cultures, and Practices . . . . .	Alasdair MacIntyre	1
Primitive Reactions—Logic or Anthropology . . .	Lars Hertzberg	24
Meaning and Intentionality in Wittgenstein's Later Philosophy . . . . .	John McDowell	40
The Dispositionalist Solution to Wittgenstein's Problem About Understanding a Rule: Answering Kripke's Objections . . . . .	Carl Ginet	53
On the Paradox Kripke Finds in Wittgenstein . . .	Arthur Collins	74
Intelligibility, Imperialism, and Conceptual Scheme . . . . .	S. L. Hurley	89
Wittgenstein on Understanding . . . . .	Warren Goldfarb	109
Persuasion . . . . .	Peter Winch	123
There Is No Such Thing As Addition . . . . .	Peter van Inwagen	138
Quietism . . . . .	Nick Zangwill	160
Authorship and Authenticity: Kierkegaard and Wittgenstein . . . . .	D. Z. Phillips	177
Wittgenstein and Infinite Linguistic Competence . . . . .	Ian Niles	193
The Anti-Realist's Master Argument . . . . .	Anthony Brueckner	214
Thought and Language in the Tractatus . . . . .	Donna M. Summerfield	224
Does Philosophy Only State What Everyone Admits? A Discussion of the Method of Wittgenstein's Philosophical Investigations . . . . .	Felicia Ackerman	246
The Second Person . . . . .	Donald Davidson	255