some of our Contributors

Howard Darmstadter

is a retired lawyer and philosophy professor. He received his doctorate from Princeton and his law degree from Harvard Law School. He taught philosophy at New York University, University of Wisconsin – Madison, University of Massachusetts – Boston and Barnard College.

Devon Bombassei

is a New York native and senior at Emory University studying philosophy and economics. She has a deep interest in German philosophy (particularly the Frankfurt School), and has conducted research at Emory School of Law in legal ethics and political philosophy. She looks forward to pursuing a joint JD-PhD in philosophy.

Seán Moran

is Philosophy Now's Street Philosopher. From Paris and Prague to Lahore and Mumbai, he goes equipped with a notebook and fountain pen, together with a vintage camera and an Irish flute. Seán was educated in Philosophy at universities in Belfast and Dublin, and in Divinity at Cambridge. When not doing his side-hustle, he teaches graduate students in Ireland and is professor of Philosophy at one of the oldest universities in the Punjab.

Amy Baker

is one of our regular artists. A graphic designer and illustrator based in Brighton, with a passion for photography and video, she is fascinated by symmetry, balance, minimalism, and otherworldly landscapes. You can see one of her illustrations on page 28 and her website is amyloisebaker.com.
