some of our Contributors

John Best

John Best is a cognitive scientist and professor emeritus from Eastern Illinois University, USA. His research program at EIU dealt with the factors underlying the ability to do conditional reasoning. His current book project examines the relationship between empirical findings regarding people's concept of humanity and the moral theory of Immanuel Kant.

Christopher Devlin Brown

Christopher Devlin Brown is an Associate Professor in the Philosophy department at Xiamen University. His main research interests are philosophy of mind and related areas of metaphysics, on the nature of consciousness and its relationship to the physical world. In his spare time he plays guitar and tours with his noise band 'dog'.

Helena Moradi

Helena Moradi, a multi-lingual Swedish legal scholar specializing in law and philosophy, is a postdoctoral fellow at Emory University's Vulnerability and the Human Condition Initiative. She conducted research at Cornell University School of Law and holds law degrees from Stockholm University and Humboldt University, and a PhD from Tsinghua University. Her work explores critical legal theory, vulnerability theory, and the philosophical implications of law.

Letizia Nonnis

Letizia Nonnis was born and raised in Italy, she immersed herself in classical studies at the Classical Lyceum, where she deepened her knowledge in Latin, ancient Greek, philosophy and literature. She is currently pursuing her studies in philosophy at the University of Roehampton.
