some of our Contributors

Dan Taylor

is a teacher and writer from South London. He is a Lecturer in Social and Political Thought at the Open University, and he writes widely on philosophy and politics. His books include Spinoza and the Politics of Freedom (2021), and Island Story: Journeys Through Unfamiliar Britain (2016), which was short-listed for the Orwell Prize. Find out more at dantaylor.blog found education really dull until she studied Philosophy at University. She now works as a supply teacher in Wiltshire where she attempts to insert humour and Philosophy into every lesson.

Lydia Masseron

Erica Stonestreet

is an Associate Professor of Philosophy. She believes that philosophy is accessible and relevant to people of all ages and all walks of life, and loves doing philosophy with her kids. She's most interested in love and caring, and the relationships, projects and things – including clutter – that make us who we are in a biographical sense.

Matei Tanasă

was born in 2004 in Romania. He was a rather dutiful child, liking rules and order. Thus, he despised the appearance that good people tend to lose unfairly. That was the reason why in 2018, while riding a train, he was profoundly shaken by the image of Socrates, unjustly killed yet victorious. He has kept philosophy close since that day.
